Please ensure you provide as much relevant information as possible. An incomplete application may not be considered until all required information and documents have been received. If in doubt seek further information and/or advice from your Law Society branch. However, please note the Law

Society cannot provide legal advice to applicants, nor review your application in advance to ascertain the likelihood of approval.

Certified copies

Please ensure the wording below is used for certifying documents (preferably with a name stamp):

"I certify this to be a true copy of the original, which I have sighted, and the photo represents a true likeness of [name of the person presenting the document to me for certification]."

Privacy and Information Handling Policy

The personal information collected and held by the Law Society will be used to process and assess your application, and for purposes connected with the Law Society's regulatory or representative functions, or both.

Further information about how the Law Society handles information including personal information is set out in the Law Society's Information Handling Policy, which can be viewed at lawsociety.org.nz/privacy. References

Before issuing a Certificate of Character, the Law Society must be satisfied that you are a fit and proper person. When making this assessment, the Law Society may take into account any matters it considers relevant, including whether you are of good character. To assist the Law Society with making this assessment, it requests that you arrange for three references to be provided to the Law Society. One reference should be an employer reference. Two references should be general character references.

Further references may be requested once the Law Society has reviewed your application.

Reference requirements

Each reference must be completed by a different person and be on the prescribed form. Only reference forms completed by the referee within the past three months will be considered.

The Law Society will not accept references posted or emailed directly by you. Your referee must send the original reference to the Law Society, although it will accept PDF versions in the following circumstances:

- The reference is supplied by a lawyer (holding a current practising certificate) and emailed directly to the Law Society from the lawyer.
- The reference is from a non-lawyer and emailed directly to the Law Society from a verifiable email address. For example, a government or recognised non-government organisation, such as [department].govt.nz, [publiccompany].co.nz, or [charity].org.nz.

In some cases, the Law Society may request the original be provided.

Please note if a referee named in your application does not provide a reference, the Law Society will follow up with them to ask why they did not provide a reference.

Employer reference

An employer reference must be provided by someone who has worked with you and provided managerial oversight of your work. Work in this context includes work you have undertaken in a volunteer capacity (for example, for a Community Law Centre or a charity).

If you are currently employed, please provide a reference from your current employer.

If you are not currently employed, but have been employed in the previous 24 months, please provide an employer reference from your most recent previous employer.

If you have not been employed in the previous 24 months, you do not need to provide an employer reference. However, you will need to provide three general character references (please see below).

General character references

Your general character references should come from people who:

- have known you personally for at least five years; and
- know you well and can speak about your character and personal qualities.

Your general character referees could be:

- lawyers (holding a current practising certificate); or
- people who must be registered for their occupation for example, teachers, doctors, nurses, and other health professionals, social workers, legal executives, real estate agents and engineers; or
- Kaumātua; or
- members of New Zealand Police; or
- serving members of the armed forces; or
- ministers of religion.

If you are unable to obtain references from one of the above, it will not adversely affect your application. You should contact your local Law Society branch to discuss alternatives.

Certain people cannot give a general character reference for you:

- Members of your family (including in-laws);
- The spouse or partner of someone who has provided a reference.

Can a reference be withdrawn?

Once a reference report has been provided to the Law Society in support of your application, only the referee can withdraw the reference. You cannot withdraw the reference yourself.

Fit and proper person

Before issuing a Certificate of Character, the Law Society must be satisfied that you are a fit and proper person for admission as a barrister and solicitor of the High Court of New Zealand.

A positive answer to any of the questions in section 9 will not automatically result in a declined application. Each case will be considered individually on its merits.

The Law Society encourages you to be open and candid with your referees and disclose to them any 'fit and proper' matters declared in section 9 so that your referees can comment on the 'fit and proper person' questions asked of them in the reference form.

The Law Society and its branches will keep details given in this section confidential, subject to the disclosures outlined in this application form and/or as otherwise authorised by you.

Please note your rights under the Criminal Records (Clean Slate) Act 2004 before providing details of any criminal record.

Health conditions

Pursuant to s 55(1)(l) of the LCA all applicants are asked to declare mental or physical health conditions that may affect their ability to perform the functions required for the practice of the law. For relevant considerations that the Law Society considers when assessing whether a health condition may affect a person's ability to perform the functions required for the practice of law, please refer to the Guidelines for Applicant's declaring health conditions on our website.

In general, it is unlikely that a physical condition would render you unable to perform the functions required for the practice of law.

Minor mental health matters and one-off episodes of illness need not be declared, nor mild anxiety during exam time.

A one-off episode of depression which was mild and related to a specific matter such as, for example, the end of a close relationship or a bereavement, does not need to be declared.

It is expected that you would declare a persistent or recurrent condition.

Please provide the following information regarding any condition you have declared:

- nature of the condition, and whether it is short term or ongoing;

- frequency and duration of episodes when it could impact on your ability to practise;
- general details of treatment received (particularly if this is ongoing);
- details of how you manage the condition and what support systems you have in place;
- if applicable, progress made toward recovery, and expected time-frame for full recovery; and
- a medical certificate and/or report from your health professional (eg GP, psychologist, psychiatrist) that confirms any condition being declared and includes comments on your fitness to practice law in light of this condition.

If you are unsure as to what you should be disclosing, then please check with your local Law Society branch. Any discussions with the branch will be of a confidential nature.

The Law Society cannot provide you with advice as to whether a particular conviction is covered by this Act. Where you are in doubt you should seek independent legal advice. If you have a conviction that is not covered by the Criminal Records (Clean Slate) Act 2004 please provide the police summary of facts/caption sheet and any court sentencing notes or decision (if available) for each conviction.
